

Flyabout

by Michal Milos

Do you know what “walkabout” means to the Aborigines? In short, it means to leave behind everything and go on a long journey to find inner peace and the answer to the question: What really matters in life? – Now, what does this have to do with flying?

Monika Petrillo, a young American private pilot, decided to go on a flying trip around Australia. She turned an ordinary holiday movie into a wonderful story about things really important in life, about relations with people we love and realization of our dreams. You won't find many explosions, hero landings and bloodcurdling aerobatics. But if you are looking for a personal film with beautiful Australia landscapes and aviation in the background, I really recommend this title.

More information and a trailer can be found at the official Flyabout website www.flyaboutmovie.com. Price: $25 (incl. shipping to Poland).